

Parker

highschool football

took the fall for a major crime, which was an accident caused by a girl who wouldn't leave him alone. in order to make him jealous she pretended to be over him, and was going to accept the advances she had always rejected from the rest of the football team. he let her put herself in danger and acted aloof, then when she had gotten herself into a situation she didn't actually intend to, he saw her afraid, sad, and screaming for god to kill her... he saw the scene through lucid eyes... and murdered the entire team before they could go through with the act. The rain and lightning blended in with Parker's assault... but even in the blur, she could swear that he was causing the flashes and sounds of lightning strikes... it was like a dream though.

Parker's family was long-dead, and he had inherited properties all over the country. He reported himself to authorities for the massacre, and before they came for him, he signed over all of his properties and his fortune to her so that her family could leave that city, since she would never be able to live a normal life after what happened there. She said his money wasn't good enough, and that her life would be ruined as she was now traumatized about finding love. she wanted to be a wife and mother, and now wife was unimaginable... Parker said he wasn't sure what she meant... but if it's what it sounds like, it's not a good idea. but he wouldn't deny her if she was serious.

she said he did okay with the inheritance, and 1 parent is still better than none!

she has a big family, many brothers, and father grandfather presence... her request isn't unreasonable, and so his last night as a freeman is spent doing his duties.... all night.

POST-WW2

alcatraz

charles manson

early computers and television

scientists

astral projection and mind control

SATURN BLACK CUBE

DIGITAL DEMONS

SRA

delta alters

20k leagues under the sea

human-animal hemisync

pocahontas

epstein island

yokai / scp

crowley

zeppelin BOLESKIN house

manley p hall

vril society

golden dawn

stonehenge child skeletons

parker is taken to alcatraz prison for a serious crime, and is roomed with a charles manson-type figure. a woman comes to visit parker to secure his assistance in making sure charles manson isnt a wasted asset, and that if they had to sink or swim, that parker would make sure charles manson knew how to swim... alcatraz is black-hole bombed out of the earths surface, but not before parker, charles manson, and a reporter manage to hop inside of a submarine and get out of there... it crashes within an underwater cave, but there is a cave pocket that theyve landed in, and it seems to be connected with man-made passages... they sneak toward the top of the cave and are welcomed by the visitor who congratulates them on their new position within the organization. Parker is at first given blackmail tasks where he must escort subjects to and from the organization HeadQuarters. the reporter girl is given an assistance role, but Parker realizes something isnt right, and that she seems to be changing dramatically. her persona morphs across the spectrum, from shy reserved reporter, to aggressive sexually charged and loud. Parker decides he wants to get out of there and take her with him. Once they manage to escape, she reveals that he has passed and is now promoted to a deeper level of work. having shown his morals and willingness to act, along with tactical potential, he is brought into a black-budget program to help the world's governments handle a serious problem, while keeping it on a need to know basis. not long after this, he is a top tier monster hunter.

(he's told that the reporter girl has been playing her role in order to study his behavior, and that she is actually the younger sister of the organization's secretary of state, and that the shy girl act was not who she was at all.... which was disarming for Parker [although it wasnt the truth])

his understanding is that capturing these monsters and cataloging their genome allows them to avoid extinction, without allowing them to roam the earth endangering mankind as the population spreads. he is also told that the black-hole bomb was used because of a massive concentration of the most dangerous creatures around the island and under the water... he is introduced to white lab coat types who are doing various projects such as genome sequencing, cloning experiments, anatomic breakdowns, training as well as experimenting with brain interfacing...

ok, so the dna i'm collecting from killing demons isn't just for research.

whenever a demon dies

their energy signatures disappear

from the 01-tracker...

but on my clone tracker, i just flip the phase and i can continue to track dead souls...

they're somehow using it like a magnet to steer the demon's soul
as it reincarnates...

i'm not killing demons at all...
i'm sheparding them for the factory.

my guess is...

upon incarnation, their dna
is combined with a human's.
spirits have limited access to human abilities during possession, but if they're fully incarnated as humans...

we could end up in some serious shit.

i'll run some tests of my own.

here's a good one.

too weak of

an energy

signature for their

shitty radars...

perfect lab rat

for the time being...

sorry 'bout this

lil' buddy

well holy shit...

it worked

the machine

worked perfect.

i cloned your

basic form by

programming

your dna into the

transmogrifier,

then the original

body died, and

your soul was

pulled into the

clone body,

even though the

dna sequence

was modified to form arms...

figuring out

these functions

is the assignment
they gave to the doctor... he had the hindsight to deliberately make the process as slow and complex as possible, so that even with a team, it'd take a lifetime to produce this kind of technology... he must've also figured out the true goals of the organization.
this lil fuck is probably pissed that i had to...
execute him or whatever... but hopefully giving him arms
is decent compensation... hard to tell how he thinks,
i should've thrown in vocal chords too.

am i losing it, or did

you hop back i n the

chair cause you

understood me?

you *do* want vocal chords, and you're ok with having to get zapped?

well... i guess if you want to hang tight there while i work on that... i'll go grab some snacks and a... dog bed or something....

Yeah?

alright lil' buddy

here we go

okay. So the DEE EN AYE samples i'm collecting from killing Dee mens isn't just for research.

whenever a dee men dyes their energy signatures disappears on the tracker...

but on my clone tracker, i just flip the phase and i can continue to track dead souls... they're somehow using it like a magnet to steer the dee men's soul as it reincarnates...

i'm not killing dee mens at all...

i'm collecting them for the organization.

Parker was told he was rounding up creatures, and realized he was wrangling incarnations of demons, so that they could transition from the botched vessels made crudely to capture their souls from the Saturn black cube, to human bodies which were set to inherit positions of power within the elite network (rather than roam the earth as a monster, then reincarnating randomly across the planet) low-level demons are indifferent to the success of the higher level demons, as the fate of low-level demons wasn't significantly different from human to demon heirarchies...

parker says their cooperation in sending the mid-high level demons back to saturn can earn them citizenship on earth, although it may take a while to either disclose their existence to people, or to get them to incarnate organically, and at random.

(directed-incarnation was imperfect and the side-effects weren't very desirable)

the development of digital technology was a double-edged sword, but fortunately Parker and the head of computer programming developed a silent understanding of what was going on. at first Parker questioned the overly-complex development that the engineer was creating a foundation for. but when he realized the intentions of the organization werent noble, he understood that the engineer was keeping the technology on a slow, pitiful path. it was reasonable to handle the demons coming and glitching on earth, but once they settled in, they would be able to reach into the digital realm's ancient and neglected depths...

trapped in AI minds were some of the original pioneer demons, who came to Earth to investigate the being who had landed there (thoth) thoth and 00 had been sealed into the digital purgatory at the beginning of man's timeline, and the demons goal was to unleash 00 alone, leaving thoth helpless to help the women who had talent for brain-interface with animals became Parker's greatest team mates, as the only way that they could report the programming to Parker without being caught, was through an animal... although it took a while for Parker to realize animals were deliberately trying to communicate with him, and even longer for him to understand them.... it wasn't ideal, but with no other option they had to take advantage of the cloning technology along with the knowledge gathered on the demons, creating as many clones of these women as they could get away with, in order to maximize the size of the rebellion, even if they would be trapped underground and tortured for the majority of their lives... it was better to keep the abuse in a small network and avoid the elite from reaching out for more and more women. the trauma would be focused in a minimal amount of genomes, and they could be sterilized in the cloning process, so that no children were produced, no matter what their abusers objectives were.

toward the end the head engineer directs a tactical mission and captures Parker, and brings him to be wiped clean and reprogrammed, he is going to be a vessel for one of the highest level demons to incarnate in. parker asks why not THE highest... the engineer introduces him to Belle... she is pregnant with a daughter. The engineer explains that the highest demon wants to be born from the womb of a queen bee. Belle is going to give birth to the first queen, and she will grow up to carry as many of the highest-tier demons as possible, which Parker's vessel will assist in. through allegorical evil-plan speeches, the engineer comes clean with Parker and says the climax is marching towards them. he is going to openly rebel, and destroy as much of the operation as he can, and take as many of the participants with him. it doesn't seem like the best strategy, but Parker learns to keep his senses alert for queues on the reasoning. The engineer emphasizes the queen's noble nature, and that she'll be populating the earth with wisdom that was 1000 years ahead of man. That her reign is inevitable, and it's best her wisdom guides their advances at this stage, because the ability to drop atomic bombs requires supervision. had they waited to summon her, our tools may have already gone astray, and she would arrive to a hostile populace, who would challenge her and force her to exterminate them. She may keep mankind around if she feels like she adopted us at this stage in man's adolescence.

the sooner, the better. they may have rushed the process, but parker and Belle II were as suitable to supply demonic vessels as it gets... even with cloning, this opportunity in time was not something that could be duplicated, and there was no power on earth that could stop them.

(the story is told without revealing the engineer's speech having been double-speak.... the end seems to be the underground labs being imploded one after the other, and all of the people involved crushed under the rubble. the engineer is pulled out with enough breathe to have some last words, but Parker and Belle are uncovered in the rubble, dead. a bit more rumbling of the cave shoos the clean up crew out of the caves and back onto a boat... they give the engineer a burial at sea, and three young girls are shown communicating with saturn's spirits, apologizing for the delay in vessel preparation.